

Chapter-wise Software Testing Objective Interview questions with answers

<http://www.gkseries.com/computer-science/software-engineering-and-case-tools/coding-and-software-testing/00002-objective-questions-answers-in-software-engineering>

6. Which one of the following is not a check to be applied to import data during a validation run?
- (A) Image checks
 - (B) Parity checks
 - (C) Passwords
 - (D) Sequence checks

Answer. Option A

7. The difference between testing and debugging is :
- (A) In testing, the objective is to establish whether the system is running as per specifications, whereas in debugging the objective is to locate and correct the errors in a system
 - (B) Both are the same except that debugging is unstructured, whereas testing is structured
 - (C) Debugging phase produces testing phase
 - (D) There are no tools for debugging, whereas testing is totally automated

Answer. Option A

8. White-box testing can be started
- (A) after SRS creation
 - (B) after designing
 - (C) after programming
 - (D) after installation

Answer. Option C

9. The type of software testing in which each module is tested along in an attempt to discover any errors in its code, is known as
- (A) Integration testing
 - (B) Acceptance testing
 - (C) Mutation testing
 - (D) Unit testing

Answer. Option D

10. The term used to refer to the checking of outputs of a computer with the corresponding documents is called
- (A) Beta Test
 - (B) Auditing through the computer
 - (C) Auditing around the computer
 - (D) Alpha Test

Answer. Option C